NEW BRITISH GESTURE FOR DISARMAMENT

International Control Of Aircraft.

FOREIGN SECRETARY DISAGREES WITH CABINET.

London, To-day.
A big British disarmament gesture having a far-reaching effect on the world's Air Forces is forecasted by the Daily Mail which says:

"The foundations of the gesture are understood to be the total abolition, or the severe curtailment, of world-wide bombing and fighting aeroplanes, grouping all commercial air lines under one international body, and a limitation of the number of privately-owned aeroplanes by a quota system operative in each country."

The Daily Mail understands that at present there is not complete agreement among the Cabinet on these proposals, owing to Sir John Simon's objections, but supporters of the plan are hopeful.

The possibility of the British Government advocating international control and restriction of aviation is also suggested by the News Chronicle which paper says announcement of which Sir John Simon is expected to make at Geneva next week. It will be "very definite" in character.

Optimism prevails at the possibility of a real step towards Disarmament being taken. — Reuter.

Japanese Secrecy.

Tokyo, To-day.
Strict secrecy is being maintained regarding the nature of the new Naval Disarmament proposals first formulated by Japan.

It is not even clear whether it will comprise a complete and clear-cut plan, like the Hoover Plan, or whether it will simply amount to detailed instructions for the guidance of the Japanese delegates at Geneva.

It seems certain that they will turn down the Hoover Plan and also Britain's Disarmament Plan.

This is certain and seems clear from a remark by a Government spokesman who, asked about this, replied, "Japan would not make a fresh proposal if she thought either the British or the American Plan offered a basis for compromise." — Reuter.

MANY ATHLETES WITH AMERICAN SQUADRON HERE

Meeting British Naval Men In Contests.

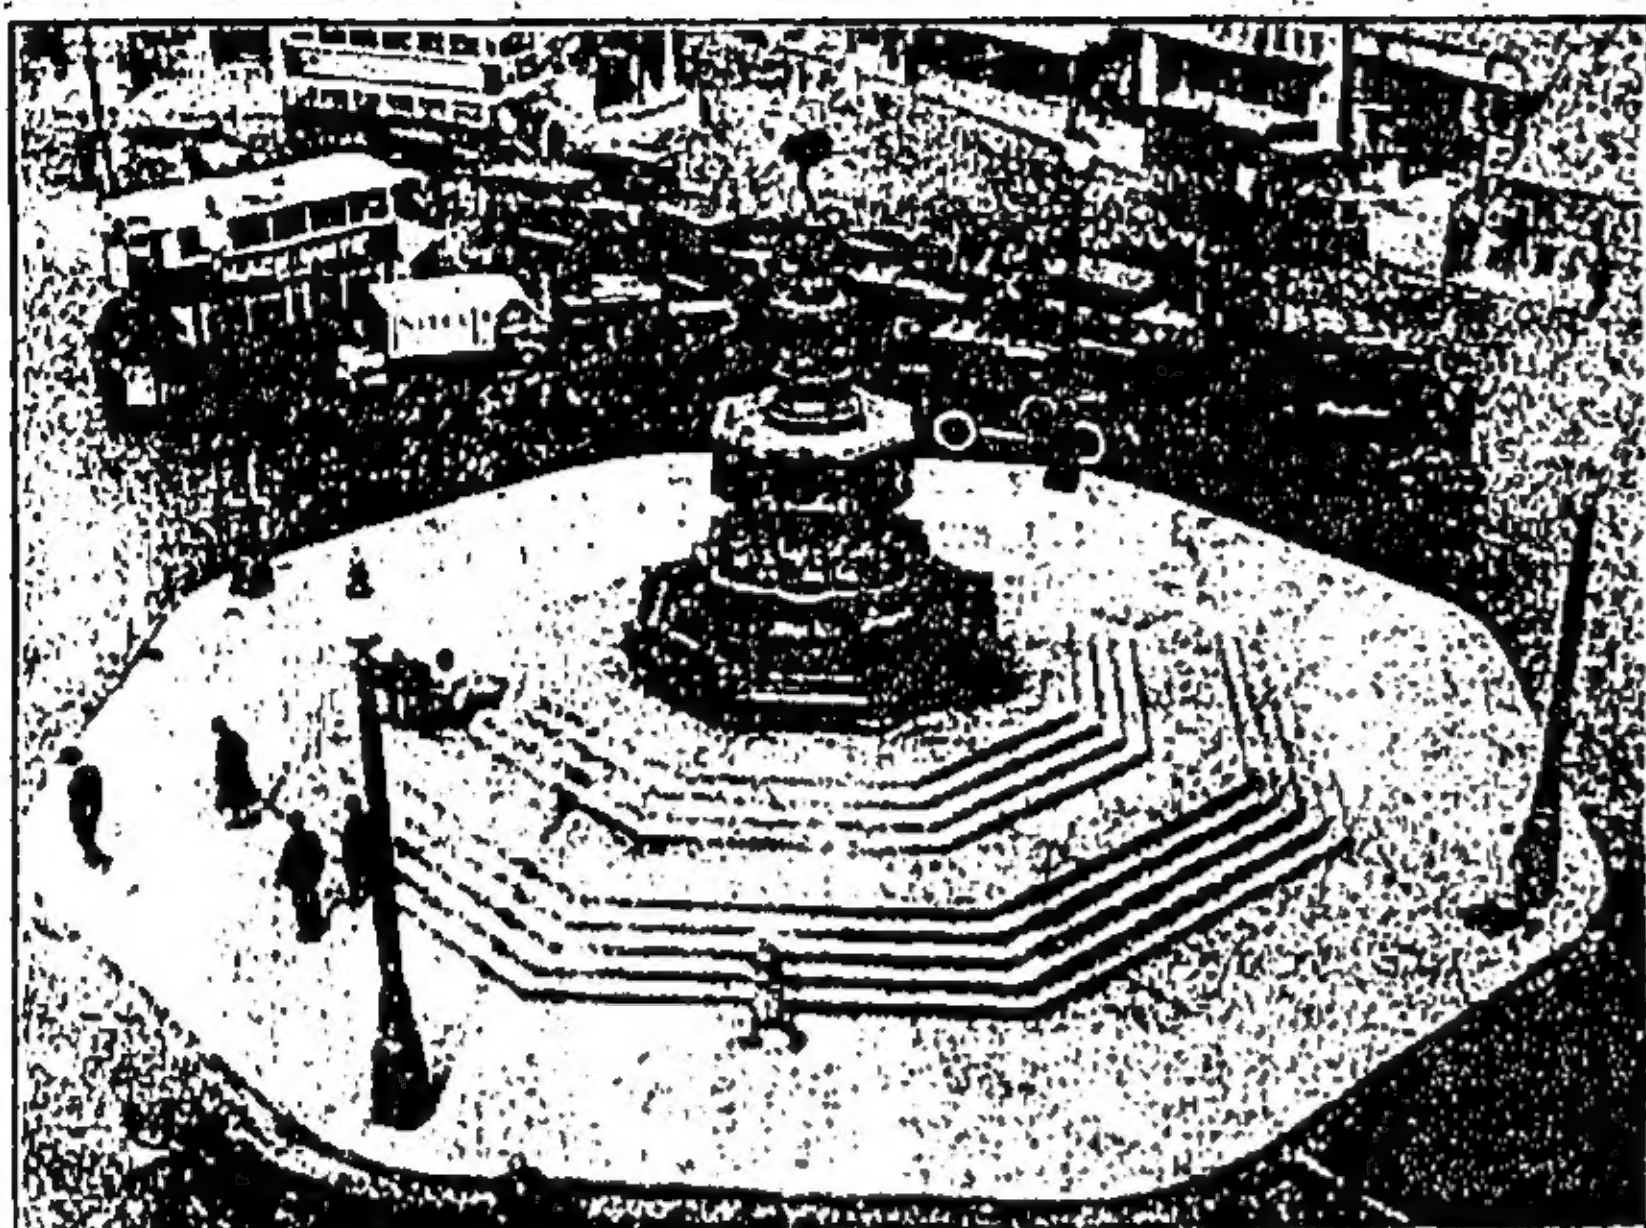

STAYING TILL NOVEMBER 9.

Approximately 2,000 sailors are with the largest American destroyer squadron ever to visit Hong Kong. The depot vessel, U.S.S. Black Hawk, one-time commercial steamer and a veteran in service, is with the 11 destroyers. Aboard this fleet are some excellent athletes in various sporting lines and, until they leave on November 9, the Americans are matched every day in all sorts of competitions.

Interviewed on board, the Black Hawk, one of the officers stated that few of the men had been in Hong Kong before. But they all like it immensely.

Throughout yesterday the men of the Argyle regiment were busy embarking on the Neerula. There

BRITISH GOVERNMENT STOCKS SHOW WEAKER TENDENCY.

New York Market Holds To Yesterday's Level.

London, To-day.
British Government stocks opened with a weaker tendency to-day after the substantial rise which followed the announcement of the new Conversion Loan. There was a rally when the lists were closed, but profit-taking accounted for later falls. War Loan advanced 1/8, Consols 2 1/2 per cent. at 77, and Consols 4 per cent. at 108 1/2.

The New York market was steady yesterday, falls holding close to their former level, industrial wavering and utilities unchanged.

GERMAN QUOTA EXAMINED.

Britain Suspects Trade Pact Violation.

London, To-day.

The British Government will send a delegation to Berlin within the next four or five weeks to discuss coal quota questions and also discover whether certain import duties constitute a violation of the Anglo-German Commercial treaty of 1926.

The composition of the delegation is not yet settled. — British Wireless Service.

DOLLAR FIRM AS POUND SLIPS.

Silver Gains Slightly In Sympathy.

The dollar remains unchanged since yesterday at 1/4 1/2.

Silver prices gained a fraction, spot silver rising from 18 1/16 to 18 1/8, while forward silver also gained 1/16 to rise to 18 1/4.

The London on New York cross rate, quoted yesterday at £3.31 1/2, dropped two points to £3.29 1/2, while the New York on London rate which was quoted yesterday at $—£3.30 1/2 dropped a point to $—£3.28 1/2.

DEBATE ON WORLD AFFAIRS.

London, To-day.

The Prime Minister Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, announced yesterday that the House of Commons debate on international affairs would take place next Thursday. — British Wireless Service.

Lady Kelly, wife of Admiral Sir W. A. H. Kelly, K.C.B., C.M.G., M.V.O., arrived in the Colony from the North on board the s.s. Rajputana this morning. She is accompanied by her daughter.

ARREST AGAIN THREATENING SAMUEL INSULL

Greek Public To Be Asked To Act.

EXTRADITION PENDING.

Washington, To-day.
The United States representative at Athens has been instructed to ask the Greek authorities to arrest Samuel Insull, pending extradition proceedings.

Insull, formerly an associate of the late Mr. Thomas A. Edison and one of the leaders of big business in America, was the controlling personality in the immense Insull enterprises, in which millions of public money were invested.

His son has already been arrested.

Insull fled from police in Paris, escaped arrest in Italy, and has taken refuge in Greece where, up to now, no extradition treaty operates. — Reuter.

ENORMOUS CONVERSION LOAN FILLED

Over-Subscribed In Three Hours.

$300,000,000 INVOLVED.

London, To-day.

Subscription lists for the new $300,000,000 three per cent. Conversion Loan, which opened at one o'clock yesterday morning, were closed three and a quarter hours later.

It is understood that the loan has been largely oversubscribed. Although the lists had been closed, investors were still able to subscribe through the Post Offices. Such applications were, however, limited to £1,000 each but they were assured of the full allotment, provided they were lodged some time yesterday.

The success of yesterday's issue completes a remarkable re-financing programme, which started a little over four months ago.

Beginning with the £2,000,000,000 of the five per cent. war loan, Britain's internal indebtedness has been cleared of all issues, carrying interest at an excessively high rate under existing conditions.

In the House of Commons yesterday afternoon, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Neville Chamberlain, in reply to a question, stated that the estimated saving due to the conversion operations was something over £38,000,000 annually in a full year. — British Wireless Service.

IRISH TROOPS ORDERED TO STAND BY AFTER THEFT.

Rumoured Theft of 10,000 Rounds of Ammunition.

Dublin, To-day.
Following the rumour, which was officially denied, that 10,000 rounds of ammunition were stolen from the barracks store in Dublin, a report was freely circulated that troops have been ordered to stand by at Curragh and other military centres.

No action has apparently been taken by the Ministry of Defence, and the order is believed to have been given by an individual officer of the National Army. — Reuter.

Britain Will Provide Work

Mr. Baldwin Hints At Unemployment Cure.

London, To-day.
In a speech before the Constitutional Club in London yesterday, Mr. Stanley Baldwin fore-shadowed a Government scheme to deal with the whole problem of able-bodied unemployed.

The Government hopes to enact it by next Summer or earlier, he said, and added that plans were not yet completed.

It might be possible to make some further announcement in this regard in the King's Speech of November 22, Mr. Baldwin declared. The scheme could be nearer maturity by then. — Reuter.

Mr. Baldwin said he hoped all parties would help to evolve a just scheme, capable of standing any test for the next quarter or half century. In the meantime, the Means Test must stay, though the anomalies and hardships of the legislation would be modified. — Reuter.

KING'S SON TO HUNT BIG GAME.

Duke Of Gloucester Plans Safari.

London, To-day.

H.R.H. The Duke of Gloucester, the King's third son, will leave England shortly after Christmas, for a shooting trip to the Sudan. He will be away from England for two or three months.

The Duke is a Captain in the 10th Hussars and the trip will be taken during his normal period of leave. He has made two earlier hunting expeditions to Africa. In 1928 he accompanied H.R.H. the Prince of Wales on a Safari in East and South Africa, when the expedition was interrupted on account of H.M. the King's illness.

In 1930, after representing H.M. the King at the Coronation of King of Abyssinia, he spent some time hunting in that country. The present trip will be of an unofficial nature, unaccompanied by ceremonial. He will probably pay a short private visit to Khartoum, as the guest of Sir John Maffey, Governor-General of the Sudan. Captain Brook, a well known big game hunter and an Extra Equerry will accompany Duke. — British Wireless Service.

THANKSGIVING AT CATHEDRAL.

London, To-day.

H.R.H. The Duke and Duchess of York yesterday attended the thanksgiving service in Lincoln Cathedral, to mark the successful termination of eleven years of work in restoring the cathedral's ancient fabric. Work was carried out at a cost of £180,000. — British Wireless Service.

M.C.C. OPEN THIRD MATCH OF TOUR

93 Runs For No Wicket At Adelaide.

Adelaide, To-day.
The M.C.C. touring cricket team opened their third match of the tour here to-day against an Australian eleven. The weather was fine and the wicket in good order.

Before a crowd of 6,000, D. R. Jardine, the English skipper, won the toss and decided to take advantage of the fine batting wicket.

Sutcliffe and Leyland, the two Yorkshire batsmen again opened and it appears that they will be the opening pair in the big matches of the tour. Scoring was slow before lunch, both players treating the ball with respect. Sutcliffe batted with restraint, but once he settled down, Leyland produced many attractive Scoring strokes. The left hander was batting brilliantly when lunch time came and appeared well on the way to a century.

GREAT BRITAIN COMMITTED TO OTTAWA PACT

Two Years' Continuity Of Policy Assured.

TARIFF BILL PASSES

London, To-day.

By a vote of 416 to 68 the House of Commons gave third reading to the Ottawa Agreements Bill yesterday. The debate followed the lines of Hackneyed arguments for and against protection.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Neville Chamberlain stressed the necessity for continuity of policy and argued it was not a breach of the Constitution that a new Government wishing to change the Ottawa Agreements should have to wait two years or so for their expiration.

The Empire could rightly rely on the continuity of a policy which must be maintained if Great Britain was to retain the respect of the world and although Parliament was entitled to alter duties, it was extremely unlikely that it would do so. — Reuter.

TRADE DELEGATION FROM SWEDEN.

Visiting In London Next Week.

London, To-day.

The Swedish delegation which is coming to London for tariff and trade conversations, is expected to arrive about the middle of next week.

In the House of Commons to-day, the President of the Board of Trade, Mr. Walter Runciman said yesterday he did not anticipate any general negotiations with the German Government on tariff matters would begin for some little time.

The recently increased German duty on salted herrings had been discussed between the fishing interests of the two countries and it was hoped that proposals for mutual concessions of a satisfactory nature might result. — British Wireless Service.

PREMIER ORDERED TO REST

London, To-day.

Premier MacDonald will not attend the Lord Mayor's banquet on November 9, because his doctor advises against it and because the daily pressure of work, which leaves him no time for functions.

However, the artificial light and smoke at banquets and such gatherings are harmful to his eyesight, the Premier has been warned.

Mr. MacDonald's general health is good but after his recent eye operation he was ordered to rest — at least until the end of the year. — Reuter.

TROOP SHIP TAKES SCOTS TO SHANGHAI

Maj.-Gen. Sandilands On Same Vessel.

COLOURFUL DEPARTURE.

Her decks crowded with Khaki-clad figures, and played out by three bands, the troopship Neerula left the harbour at 10 a.m. this morning en route to Shanghai with a battalion of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders and a number of details. His Excellency, the General Officer Commanding, Major-General J. W. Sandilands, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., was on board the ship, en route to the North to pay a short visit.

His Excellency, accompanied by his A.D.C.'s, Captain D. R. M. Cameron and Lieut. Baskerville-Glegg, arrived at the quay-side about half an hour before the ship sailed, and after exchanging greetings with a large number of officers, went on board.

DEMOCRATS CONFIDENT, BUT CAUTIOUS

Hoover Starts Desperate Effort In Mid-West.

AMERICAN ECONOMIC POLICY CRITICISED.

New York, To-day.

The confidence of the Democrats that a great majority of the country is on their side is expected to be reflected by a policy of caution in the final days of the election campaign.

Political circles believe that their immediate care will be not so much to win new adherents as to endeavour to avoid alienating any section of their supporters.

It is noteworthy that Mr. Roosevelt in his speech at the Opera House, opening his final drive to secure New York State, insisted essentially on the national character of his programme, and while appealing for support of discontented Republicans, declared that his watchword was the interdependence of all groups and all economic interests.

He criticised President Hoover for excessive attention to particular interests and denied his claim of having saved the United States from chaos.

The Democratic candidate opined that he, Roosevelt, would secure a better co-operation from Congress if he were returned, quoting his own record as Governor of New York State, with a Republican majority in the State Legislature.

Policy Criticised.
Mr. Owen Young, introducing Governor Roosevelt's dwell on America's need for a Liberal Government.

He criticised the American international economic policy since the War and said the United States had chosen neither isolation nor internationalism, had lent freely abroad, had encouraged industrial and agricultural expansion, and then had proceeded to erect unnecessary barriers to international trade.

"We shall have to reduce our competitive barriers to preserve the world's sanity. It is time the Liberal parties came into power to save the Conservatives from their own destruction," he said.

Roosevelt's Lead.
Meanwhile President Hoover left for the mid-west in a last effort to prevent the farmers from deserting the Republicans.

In contrast to the Democrats' efforts to dig in and consolidate their gains, the Republicans all over the country are expected to make a desperate attack to recover as much as possible the ground which they admit they have lost in recent years.

The final return in the straw vote carried out by the Literary Digest in which over 3,000,000 votes were registered, shows that Roosevelt leads in 41 States with a vote of approximately 3 to 2 over Hoover, giving Roosevelt 474 electoral college votes, and Hoover 57.

The Socialist, Mr. Thomas, gets 3.8 per cent of the popular votes but no electorals. — Reuter.

EUROPEAN FINED $40 FOR SPEEDING.

Mr. W. L. Cole was fined $40 at the Central Magistrate's court this morning for driving his car dangerously in Lower Albert Road at 9.05 a.m. on October 14.

Prosecuting, Mr. T. H. King said that Cole was driving his car at a terrific speed, and he (Mr. King) had to brake very sharply to avoid a serious accident.

THE THEATRE'S FASHIONS.

"Rose Blonde" Is New Hair Shade.

London, October 15. The "little" season is considered to have been launched at the first night of Noel Coward's revue, "Words and Music." Many celebrities were present. Lady Brecknock, who has returned from Paris, wore a coat of paillette over a blue dress. Lady Anglesey wore white satin, and Lady Juliet Duff, as did also Lady Ravensdale; who wore her favourite earrings, red stones, set in gold, nearly four inches long. A golden frock was worn by Miss Constance Collier. Lady Patricia Moore wore a cream picture frock. It was a very warm evening, but Lady Dashwood, who is renowned for her smart dressing, remained faithful to her bear-skin cape, which was worn over a grey satin dress. A new crinkly crepe in white was worn by Mrs. Ronald Balfour. The dress had an Empire waistline. Mr. and Mrs. Mollison, Miss G. B. Stern, and Lady Lavery (in white) were others to be seen.

The hairdressers' fashion fair at Olympia sets hair styles for the coming year. Experts say that short hair is doomed. The latest is cringle waves to the back of the head, and then very tight curls to the nape and round the ears. Hair must not come below the nape of the neck. Curls are very fashionable. Women with sleek hair must wear their hair drawn back from the forehead to the nape, where there are curls and waves. Curls carried across the forehead on a slant with a centre parting and an exposed forehead, with hair framing the rest of the face, are other styles.

The rose blonde is to take the place of the platinum blonde. The new colour is an apricot tinge, and a big success is predicted for it. The once despised "ginger" is now very fashionable. If you are not "ginger" by nature, then you must use dye.

Other novelties at the fair besides hair, are lipsticks guaranteed to be proof against eating and drinking, hair brushes with removable bristles, and rubber nail brushes for removing nail enamel.

WINDBLOWN HEADS SUPERSEDED.

Neater Appearance Fashion's Order.

"NATURALNESS" IDEAL.

The windblown coiffure has been superseded by a less drastic head-dress. Women are wondering how to conform to the new trend of hair fashions. The ends that trailed aimlessly about the face are no longer acceptable to the modern woman, who prefers a neat and more feminine appearance.

These feathered ends have been restored to order, and lie in small fluffy curls on the forehead and down the side of the head.

The partings are placed deep on one side and extend to the nape of the neck. The hair is kept smooth and flat on the top of the head gradually breaking into rather wide waves several inches from the parting, the ends of which are curled becomingly to mingle with the small fluffy sides which are curled towards the face.

The hair is slightly permanently waved to give springiness and permanency to the necessary curls. The whole coiffure consists of fewer waves, which are, therefore, larger and softer and comply with the latest trend in fashion, namely, that the hair should not be worn unyaved, but less waved than of late.

A distinct line, coupled with smoothness and feather into soft curls, are the essential features of present-day hairdressing styles.

"Complete naturalness" is the autumn ideal of hairdressing modes, and it is expected that the styles seen at the forthcoming Hairdressing Fair of Fashion will be designed to achieve this effect. Fringes are definitely coming back. Modern girls are beginning to realize that the high brow line is not always becoming. The darker hair the lighter will be the fringe.

SEASIDE COIFFURES.

Those who enjoy swimming as well as sun bathing, are re-arranging their permanent waves so that they will be well protected from the bad effect of sea water. So the top of the head is brushed sleekly and not pressed into tight waves, with the parting fairly low at the side.

In most instances curls have disappeared entirely. But the neckline must not be sudden. That is why waves are now taken far down into the neck.

Low curls are not easy to press to the head under the bathing cap, but curling ends, if they come high against the ears, can be tucked away, and easily twisted into curls when the cap is taken off again.

CINECISMS

Charlotte Suss, the German star, has left Berlin for Hollywood to take up a long-term contract with M.G.M.

Ralph Graves is in hospital under observation for appendicitis.

Ronald Colman made one of his rare public appearances recently at the birthday party of his friend, William Powell.

Hollywood has only twenty-eight full-length films in production—half the number being made at this time last year.

Dorothy Hale, a Pittsburg society girl who has been in turn chorus girl, art student, sculptress and manager of an art gallery, is to appear in "Cynara" with Ronald Colman. She has been put on a long-term contract by Samuel Goldwyn.

An independent Hollywood producer is to film the W. T. Stendhal novel, "If Christ Came to Chicago."

Charles Ray is to return to the screen in "The Wayne Murder Case."

M.G.M. has completed negotiations with Somerset Maugham for the screen rights of "The Painted Veil," which will star Joan Crawford.

A prospective "happy event" has prevented Helen Twelvetrees accepting an offered role in "I'm a Fugitive" opposite Paul Muni. Either Mae Clarke, who has just recovered from a nervous breakdown, or Wynne Gibson will get the part.

The walls of Gary Cooper's dressing room at the Paramount studios are adorned by many sketches done by the star himself. While working in pictures he amuses himself between scenes by sketching for he intends on returning to Montana his home state, to endeavour to picture the glories of that vast land of mountains and blue distances.

Victor McLaglen and Edmund Lowe will repeat their "quarrelsome he-man" business in a film version of the play, "Riddle Me This."

The new Gaumont studios at Shepherd's Bush, which cost £500,000 and are among the finest in the world, were officially opened by Isidore Ostrer, President of the Gaumont-British Picture Corporation.

Alice White announces in Hollywood that she has received an offer from a British producer, but that she is not at the moment able to accept it.

Tam Mix is to star in six more cowboy dramas for Universal.

Bette Davis' contract with Warner Brothers has been renewed.

Walter Huston and Jackie Cooper are to appear together in "Father and Son."

Kay Francis has cancelled her proposed European holiday to accept the starring part in "Honest Flinder," to be directed by Ernest Lubitsch. The contract, for which she will receive $5,000, was handed to her as she stepped aboard an air-liner for the first stage of her journey. She let the aeroplane go without her.

The Fox production of "Cavalcade," shortly to go before the cameras, is absorbing most of Hollywood's English colony. Clive Brook, John Warburton, Bramwell Fletcher, Phyllis Clare, Lillian Bond and many other English artists have already been engaged.

Stanley Lupino's new picture, "Sleepless Nights," with Polly Walker in the cast, will have started by the time this appears in print, and other films are on the way.

However, in the studio at the far end of the grounds the cameras are turning on Double Trouble, under the direction of Harry Hughes. It is a very complicated comedy, with Molly Lamont, Jerry Verno, Gus McNaughton, Renee Gadd, and Jack Hobbs in the cast.

GRAND LINE OF PICTURES DUE AT CENTRAL

PROHIBITION REVEALED IN "WET PARADE."

Warner Oland Scores As Detective In "Charlie Chan's Chance."

"Amateur Daddy" is not a sexy play, just sentimental and entertaining with Warner Baxter as the hero who gives up his career as a construction engineer in order to take care of a brood of orphan children, the eldest of whom is the appealing Marian Nixon. I am not saying it is an outstanding film, but I like it, and if you take your kiddies, they too, will revel in it. (King's).

"The Lost Squadron."

We have had a lot of aviation pictures, but "The Lost Squadron" is different. Richard Dix is the captain of a trio of Army flyers, who at the termination of the war, make the Three Musketeer pledge. They eventually find themselves stunt flyers in a motion picture studio, where the unscrupulous director, Erich von Stroheim (whom I do not favour in any way) will go to any extreme for realism. Dix, Joel McCrea and Bob Armstrong, (I don't like his new moustache) turn in grand performances. Dorothy Jordan and Mary Astor have little to do.

The photography is excellent and George Archibald, proves himself, as nearly always, a most capable director. The play is exciting, even if drawn out at the finish, when it descends to melodrama. It misses being a great film, but it is novel, and the author, Dick Grace, gives a ring of truth to it. Don't miss this one. (Central).

Prohibition Theme.

"Wet Parade" will cause a lot of argument in the United States. Prohibition is the theme of Upton Sinclair's novel adapted with such daring for the screen. No angle of the drink problem is avoided. The picture lasts about two hours, and is filled with great acting and devastating character studies. Major honours go to my favourite character actor, Walter Huston, who is the willing victim of the drink curse, with Lewis Stone as the aristocrat who rebels against it.

Both Dorothy Jordan and Robert Young are exceptionally fine. Jimmy Durante will surprise you by his sincerity in a death scene. Neil Hamilton and Wallace Ford could not be better. Admittedly, you emerge from the theatre a trifle bewildered and in doubt as to whether you would vote "Wet" or "Dry," when it comes down to bed-rock. Still, the story gives us gang murders, drunken orgies, politics and a few other exciting events thrown in. (Queen's).

Olympic Games Pictorial.

If you are not tired of looking at the Olympic Games, the Magic Carpet give us their showing of the events, in addition to Earl Bigger's newest yarn, "Charlie Chan's Chance." You will certainly find this adventure of solving a complicated murder in New York unusually interesting. The mystery is too complicated to make for a well-balanced picture, but the suspense is there, and the acting from a large cast is near perfection. Warner Oland is again the pedantic, pleasant, humorous detective with his continual use of famous proverbs. I won't tell you the story, but we have H. B. Warner, James Kirkwood, Marian Nixon, Linda Watkins, Ralph Morgan, Alexander Kirkland and Jimmy Wang. Most entertaining. (King's).

Don't fail to see Joan Crawford and Clark Gable in one of their best pictures to date, "Possessed." Then over the week-end, Ramon Novarro and Madge Evans in an absurd story

Ramon Novarro

"Son of India," followed by "The Rosary," interesting only because it shows us two girls who have since become famous, Elizabeth Allen, and Adrienne Allan. Then Jack Hulbert stealing all the honours in the exciting "Ghost Train." Well worth seeing. (Star).

Sunshine Susie Again.

A musical play that can certainly be revived, "Sunshine Susie," with Renate Muller, the blond German girl, Owen Nares, and Jack Hulbert giving us all the laughs as the Bank porter. See it again. (King's).

I liked Laurence Oliver best in "The Yellow Ticket," wherein Elissa Landi and Lionel Barrymore struggle with old-fashioned melodrama. Joan Bennett and Spencer Tracy with James Kirkwood entertain in "She Wanted a Millionaire," finishing with Roland Young, Ruggles and Lily Damita in "This is the Night." (Oriental).

Chevalier Returns.

Coming in November, Maurice Chevalier and Jeanette MacDonald in "Love me To-night." The two Charlies, Ruggles and Butterworth, form part of a huge cast. A French tailor finds himself a guest at a week-end party in a Chateau. The Princess falls in love with him, and is furious when she finds the supposed "Count" is only a tailor, but love finally triumphs. I hear it is more than naughty, and Rouben Mamoulian is not so subtle with his suggestion as Lubitsch. (King's).

A perfectly amazing array of first releases are promised by the New Management of the popular Central Theatre. Among the super films we shall have John Boles and Irene Dunne in "Back Street," Irene Dunne and Ricardo Cortez in "Symphony of Six Million," Ralph Lynn and Tom Walls in two of the most amusing farces, "A Night Like This," (One long scream) and "Thark."

Cyril Maude's old stage play, "The Flag Lieutenant," is also coming, and the new beauty Tala Birell and Varconi in "The Doomed Battalion." Dolores del Rio in her best talkie "Bird of Paradise," John Barrymore and Helen Twelvetrees in "State's Attorney," and a thriller, "Bring 'Em Back Alive," are others. I hear that Jack Buchanan's latest, "Good-night Vienna" is the biggest money-maker yet turned out by British films. We shall not have any cause to grumble with the list of great pictures from Universal and Radio promised under the Peacock Film Corporation. (Central).

I was agreeably surprised with the work of Robert Young. He reminds me tremendously of Robert Montgomery, in mannerisms, voice and acting. He has not, of course, the looks, charm and polish of the famous star. Margaret Perry has the makings of a splendid actress, but at present, she wants to learn how to dress, and certainly should watch her callories. In "New Morals for Old," these, two almost monopolise the picture. I liked the mother, Laura Hope Crews, (a famous stage actress). Lewis Stone had too little to do.

Ricardo Cortez

The story has drama, and there are parts that are especially fine. The theme of the misunderstanding between different generations is not new, but it is always interesting because of its universal appeal: Not to be missed. (Queen's).

Fine British Thriller.

Who killed Markham Savage? Find out when you see the British film, "Deadlock," starring the man with the golden voice, Stewart Rome. The story deals with a murder in a talkie studio, and much of the drama is enacted against the studio background. Then we move to the home of a famous K.C., the Old Bailey (where special permission was obtained to photograph authentic surroundings, and the Air Port at Croydon).

Stewart Rome made his name famous in the movies, Warwick Ward, who is well-known on the Continent, Marjorie Hume, Annette Benson and Alma Taylor, under the direction of George King, will help to make this talkie within a talkie, interesting. (King's).

England takes a jab at American gang wars in this hilarious travesty, "Innocents of Chicago." Henry Kendall does a neat job as the Englishman who falls heir to a Chicago beer racket, and thinks it is a milk business till the bullets start spattering around. Bernard Nedell, whom many local residents will remember with Daniel Frawley in the old City Hall, is now a famous London actor-manager and tremendously popular in British films. His wife, Olive Blakeney is now leading lady in Ian Hay's latest "Orders are Orders." Not such gross exaggeration and certainly amusing. (Coming to Queen's).

Notes From Here And There.

Look at this for a cast in the Fox production, "State Fair." Janet Gaynor and Will Rogers, co-starred. Phillips Holmes, Sally Eilers, Spencer Tracy, Louis Dresser. By the eye Farrell is with Gaynor in "Tess of the Storm Country." Yvonne Arnaud is starring at the Globe Theatre in "Will You Love Me Always?" Miriam Jordan the English actress is finishing work with Warner Baxter in "Six Hours to Live."

The Countess di Frasso who was Dorothy Taylor, an American girl, may act at some future time with Gary Cooper. Her brother, Bert, is going places with Lupe Velez.

Loretta Young will play the Nun in "The Miracle." James Cagney will appear on the stage. Norma Talmadge had a triumph when she appeared at the New York Paramount Theatre, and when her partner George Jessel sang crooningly in her ear, "You're my Everything," the whole audience could readily believe the gossip that Norma's husband and George's wife were agreeable to divorce. No wedding-bells for Norma and George—and not, as we all thought with Gilbert Roland.

You can't help smiling at the well-known soap advertisement, "I am over 39." Ruth Chatterton gave her age as thirty-four on her marriage licence, when she and George Brent, Irishman, aged 28 years were recently married. Theatre records which always lean to flattery give Ruth's age as 39 years.

After finishing "Sign of the Cross," Elissa Landi may return to Broadway. Mary Pickford wanted badly to buy the rights of the stage hit, "Another Language," but failed, so wants to try "Secrets" again, against her friends' advice. Gary Cooper will be her next leading man.

KING'S THEATRE

Commencing Sunday, 6th Nov.

CHARLIE CHAN'S CHANCE

Warner Oland, Alexander Kirkland, H. B. Warner, Ricardo Cortez, Madge Evans, Jimmy Wang, Linda Watkins, Marian Nixon, Ralph Morgan, Alexander Kirkland and Jimmy Wang.

Maurice To Marry Again?

Hollywood predicts another marriage for Maurice Chevalier, but who is the girl?—Will Rogers has signed another contract with Fox. $125,000 per picture. Charlie Chaplin's present attraction rides to her work as a chorus girl in Eddie Cantor's newest film, "The Kid from Spain," in a Rolls-Royce. Billie Dove is in vaudeville, Esther Ralston a hit in London, Vilma Banky making pictures in Germany, Rod la Rocque acting on Broadway, and poor ill-fated, beautiful Mary Nolan appearing in a sort of Sadie Thompson sketch in vaudeville.

Ethel Barrymore is living in the mansion once occupied by P. G. Wodehouse. Wodehouse was known as the man who earned $100,000 for doing nothing. Anne Harding has been appearing in public wearing a black wig, but the secret is out. Her ex-husband is talking of marrying a chorus girl. Mr. and Mrs. George Brent will occupy a home once owned by Florence Vidor. They say in Hollywood Ruth and ex-Ralph Forbes will always remain firm friends.

MAIL REVIEW

"NEW MORALS FOR OLD"—QUEEN'S THEATRE.

"New Morals For Old," an M.G.M. production adapted from John van Druyten's stage play, is playing to a well filled house at the Queen's Theatre.

Robert Young, who is cast as the son and whose ambition it is to become a painter, is well portrayed, Margaret Perry, who takes the part of the daughter, is inclined to over-act the part.

Lewis Stone, although wrongly cast, gives an excellent interpretation of the rigid father with a kindly heart. He shares acting honours with Laura Hope Crews who is excellent as the mother.

David Newell, Jean Hersholt, Mitchell Lewis and Elizabeth Patterson all fill minor roles.

A comedy and Hearst's Newsreel complete a good programme.

MAIL REVIEW

"AMATEUR DADDY"—KING'S THEATRE.

Warner Baxter, whose memorable performance with Janet Gaynor in "Daddy Long Legs" is still fresh in one's mind, assumes a fatherly role in Fox's production "Amateur Daddy" the current attraction at the King's Theatre.

Baxter is cast as a young hard-working American construction engineer—the typical kind-hearted bachelor so characteristic of everyday life. He falls in love with Marion Nixon, who did good work in "After Tomorrow," and becomes an "amateur daddy." The director, John Blystone, has treated the film with the right touch that gives it a very human appeal.

The film is taken from Mildred Cram's novel "Scotch Valley," and the cast also includes Rita LaRoy and William Pawley. Recommended!

MAIL REVIEW

"TWO ORPHANS"—ORIENTAL THEATRE.

The first Cantonese talking film "Two Orphans" is now showing at the Oriental Theatre. Wu San is cast in the leading role, and the production was produced by the United Motion Picture Industrial Ltd.

TROOP SHIP TAKES SCOTS TO SHANGHAI.

The squadron, which includes 11 destroyers, carrying a complement of 110 men each, and 600 on the Black Hawk, has already entered the field of sport. It played H.M.S. Cumberland a return game of soccer, having drawn 0-0 up in Chefoo some months ago. It lost the replay by three goals.

Among the various sporting activities the ships enjoy are baseball, for which they have little opposition; soccer, a game at which they excel and like; water polo, in which they have already played one game and are meeting the British Navy to-day at the Y.M.C.A. Pool at 5 p.m.

Among other sporting activities, the U.S. Navy meets the Royal Navy at soccer and also at tennis, both of which matches are being held at the U.S.R.C. ground in Kowloon this afternoon.

To-night at Murray Barracks, the American Bluejackets start their Navy fixing tournament, which should be very interesting as the squadron has several fine men in all classes.

In connection with the visit of the Destroyer Squadron, water polo games can be arranged by sending a note to the Officer in charge of sports, notifying him of time and place.

This is not the first visit of the Argyl Regiment to Shanghai. In February last they were rushed there on the H.M.S. Suffolk to take their place in the international defence scheme of Shanghai during the Sino-Japanese trouble.

They were landed during the tentative bombardment of Chapel by the Japanese troops and were placed in a "quiet occupation" of the post allotted to them immediately upon being landed.

MAIL REVIEW

"THE LOST SQUADRON"—CENTRAL THEATRE.

The self-sacrificing brotherhood of men, air thrills galore, and a glorious romance are combined in the RKO-Radio Pictures "The Lost Squadron" now showing at the Central Theatre.

Richard Dix and a remarkable supporting cast appear in this dramatic air-thriller which is about the making of aviation movies in Hollywood.

Based on the stirring adventures of the film stunt aviators—men who risk their lives for the sake of injecting thrills in pictures—the film tells the story of these nerveless fliers and supply thrills in plenty.

Robert Armstrong, Joel McCrea, Mary Astor, Dorothy Jordan and Ralph Ince appear in the supporting cast.

OFFICIAL SOURCES.

"CARNIVAL"—AT THE CENTRAL.

A film of beauty, movement and power, aptly describes "Carnival" the British super-production coming to the Central Theatre on Sunday next. Most of the scenes are set to music—music not deliberate, but a subtle accompaniment to the action of the film. The acting is superb: Matheson Lang, Dorothy Bouchier and Joseph Schildkraut all give of their best. Matheson Lang needs no eulogy, his powerful acting is too well known, neither does Joseph Schildkraut, whose "romantic lover" roles have endeared him in many feminine hearts, but special mention must be made of Dorothy Bouchier, who looks amazingly lovely in this film. Her acting, poise and appearance have improved beyond belief. The change from "Chili" to Dorothy has certainly given us a "warmer" and more lovable little actress!

A dance will be held by H.M. Submarine Osiris at the Garrison Lecture Hall to-night from 8.30 p.m. until 1 a.m. Music will be provided by the Orchestra of the Lincolnshire Regiment.

Animal Atavism.

Few parents but will learn with interest about the animal propensities of young children. For many years now Dr. Hrdlicka, Curator of Physical Anthropology of the Smithsonian Institution, has made it his business to watch the young, and reports that have been made reveal a highly disquieting state of affairs which will hasten the doom of youth and abruptly terminate the excessive admiration which mere youthfulness has too often received. Young children who are fond of representing themselves to be animals ought to be a source of anxiety to their parents. It is quite superficial to conclude that the child's future is probably secure as a pantomime cat, and that there is consequently no need to bother about an expensive education. The better the acting, the more sustained and thorough the identification—and some children take no notice, for weeks on end, unless they are treated as dogs or cats—the more ominous is the whole proceeding, and the more humiliating is the deduction which the parents ought to draw. Children, say these reports, may be not so much acting as harking back. Often they give such detailed performances that it is difficult for science to believe they are being purely imitative. Small wonder if scientists begin to murmur in their beards about "philogenetic inheritance" when they are told by truthful parents of children who prefer all-fours to more civilized postures, carry objects in their mouths, nibble at grass, roll on the floor for extended periods, and bite and snap at people's legs. Dr. Hrdlicka and the other scientists who have chosen this field for their observations are anxious to win the confidence of parents and to reassure them that animal atavism does not preclude success in after-life. If anything, it is the other way about. They tell, for parental encouragement, the story of a boy whose joy it was to wallow and grunt with a pig. He and the pig understood one another perfectly and lived happily in a mud-puddle, the boy being an only child and his parents being busy. It is perhaps a bitter pill for preparatory schoolmasters, but that boy is now an honour student in an American college. When it is remembered how many of the business occupations of grown-up men need, for the most complete success, the development of certain instincts in a very high degree, it is easy to understand that it may be a great help to have a great deal of the wolf or the shark in your blood. The pity is that, even with so-called old families, the pedigree stops much too soon, and the man really ambitious to have a business magnate for a son has no means, till the boy is born, and begins to display his zoological variants, of knowing if he has married into the right strains of jungle blood. But the chances are so uncertain, and the prospects of finding little beyond jellyfish traits loom so large for those who accept this mythology, that the encouragement about after-life is not in itself sufficient. It is disconcerting to parental authority to realize that whole categories of rebukes about cubs and puppies do not sting but are accepted by the unrepentant young as mere statements of fact. The son considers himself a young cub and feels his father alien and oppressive if punishment follows a cub-like action. The tongues of spinsters the world over are being strengthened by these researches, and the boasting of young parents will take on a more faltering note. Certain achievements, however, are seen to justify the paeans of parental praise. It is a great thing to walk if it is the first step away from Jungledom. But it may be anticipated that many careful mothers will veto those animal games which fathers love to play, and will veto them from a terrified fear of letting loose or calling forth the ape or the tiger in their innocent lambs. For all the prospects there may be of a successful after-career, it is a distressful thing to seek to found a family and to find you have stocked a zoo. For such parents the best consolation is to remember that there are lower depths still, children who identify themselves, not with animals or even with vegetables, but with minerals, and whose joy is to imagine themselves to be steam engines, or other mechanical inventions. Whether this be called the ultimate atavism or the dim stirrings of remote futurity, this secret dehumanization to which many children are addicted, at once noisy and monotonous in its manifestations, may make any parent search his own conscience for any excessive wallowing in garages, and greet with relief whatever can elicit from his children a healthy animal yell or howl.

HERE, THERE and EVERYWHERE.

A member of a week-end party challenged his fellow guests to name seven wonders of the new world, and an interesting discussion followed.

The seven wonders of the ancients are generally held to have been the Pyramids of Egypt, the Hanging Gardens of Semiramis at Babylon, the Temple of Diana at Ephesus, the Colossus at Rhodes, Phidias's statue of Jupiter at Athens, the Mausoleum at Halicarnassus, and the Pharos at Alexandria.

After an animated discussion which lasted some hours, the following list of the seven new wonders of the world was produced:

The Empire State skyscraper in New York.

New Delhi.

The liner Majestic.

The Panama Canal.

Graf Zeppelin II.

The new Russian hydro-electric station at Dnieprostroy.

The immense statue of Christ in the Andes.

London's Wonders.

The conversation then turned to the wonders of London, old and new.

The seven wonders of the older London, it was generally agreed, are:

The Tower.

St. Paul's Cathedral.

Tower Bridge.

Big Ben.

The Crystal Palace.

St. Pancras Station.

Westminster Cathedral.

The seven new wonders caused a longer debate, but it was eventually decided that a Londoner who had returned to his native city after an absence of several years would want to see first:

The "Daily Express" building.

Piccadilly Tube Station.

New Broadcasting House.

The new Bank of England (when completed).

Lambeth Bridge, with the Imperial Chemical Industries building and Thames House.

Dorchester House.

Charing Cross Post Office.

Some members of the party voted for the inclusion, as an eighth wonder, of the remarkable new Central Power Station in erection, on the Thames Embankment.

Your Daily Smile.

KNOWLEDGE.

Here's a bit of information that cost me 42s. to acquire: the silk stockings cost 42s. a pair.

DOUGH OR DIE!

"Many men make riches their sole aim in life," declares a woman novelist.

Another Joke About Mother-in-Law.

I read in a newspaper that a man complained in court that his friend's dog bit his mother-in-law. Surely not complained?

Facts You Did Not Know.

A new railroad car for transporting helium gas for the United States navy is composed of six hollow steel spheres instead of the usual form of cylindrical tank.

Carrying its motor in the rear, a streamlined automobile invented in England is virtually noiseless, economical of fuel and can turn corners at high speed safely.

News In Brief.

Two cases of typhoid fever, one occurring in Hong Kong and one in Kowloon, and one Kowloon case of meningitis, were notified to the Health Authorities on Wednesday.

Owing to the reservation of the sixth floor of the Peninsula Hotel for the Sports Club Supper Dance on Saturday, the management of the hotel advises that the usual dinner dance in the Rose Room will not take place that night.

Driven From The Sun Gari River

Indignities Suffered By British Trader

AN "OPEN DOOR" FARCE

Despite the contention that the basis of the establishment of Manchukuo is the fusion of the component bodies which form its population, it would seem that, as far as trading on the Sungari River is concerned, preference amounting to exclusion in practice exists. This information has been given to the "North-China Sunday News" by Mr. Doran Webb, a British subject, who has arrived in Shanghai from Harbin where, with several friends, he has been endeavouring to promote a small trade on the Sungari with a private leased junk. His efforts were finally frustrated, according to his report, because he flew the British flag as a possible safe-guard against attacks by the banditry who infest the river, which led, after certain humiliating circumstances, to the confiscation of his boat by the Japanese authorities.

Mr. Webb started legitimate business on the river, he states, when it was declared open, and sailed his boat under the Manchukuo flag, his first consignment being a cargo of 250 tons of beans from Hsintien to Harbin, a matter of 145 versts. He was passed on the river by another boat which lower down was attacked by bandits, sustained several casualties, including the death of Captain, and the entire crew was seized and held to ransom. Mr. Webb reported the matter to the Japanese naval authorities when he reached Harbin.

Flying British Flag.
Their next job was timber hauling from Harbin to Hulan, and their crew having left them, fearing further attacks from bandits, another was enrolled, and having information of the presence of large numbers of bandits in the district, it was decided to fly the British flag in the hope that it might afford them some measure of protection.

No objection was voiced by the Chinese or Japanese authorities with whom they were constantly in contact, said Mr. Webb. At the conclusion of this assignment the party secured four junks, and, having acquired clearance papers, set off up the river for Querhay. Early the following morning a Japanese patrol boat stopped them and they were told by the Lieutenant in charge that their papers were worthless without a permit from the Japanese authorities, and that the river was dangerous. He ordered their immediate return, telling them to leave the four junks behind for another vessel to bring down. No reference was made by the flying of British colours, however, said Mr. Webb.

When he reported to the Japanese naval officials at Harbin he was informed that only Japanese military shipping was allowed on the Sungari, which ships, he said, went down river with bean cargoes and returned with troops, flying the Japanese flag.

Trouble With Patrol Boat.
Another interesting incident in Webb's narrative occurred when he was halted by a Japanese patrol boat and ordered to come aboard. As he had a camera in his hand he took a snapshot of the patrol ship. After answering a number of written questions regarding his destination, cargo, reasons for working, etc., he was asked to explain the law regarding the flying of foreign flags on the Sungari. Knowing only the Chinese law he was unable to do so, and pointed out that he flew the British flag as a possible protection against pirates. Why he took photographs was the next query, whereupon Mr. Webb explained that he always carried a camera to snap any views of interest. At this the Japanese Lieutenant took the film from the camera and destroyed it.

Then Mr. Webb, as a joke, asked him who would pay for the film. At this the Lieutenant produced a small bore pistol, pointed it at Webb's head and said, "This."

After a strong protest, during which time Mr. Webb continued to face the pistol, announcing his intention to report the matter to the British Consul, the officer lowered the gun and offered to pay for the film, an offer which was immediately refused.

Guarded, Then Confiscated.
Followed a series of vicissitudes in which Mr. Webb appears to have been taken control of by Japanese authorities, who commandeered his boat and his services almost at the point of a pistol. At various times, whether by day or night, he was liable to be ordered to proceed on some duty on the river, towing junk-loads of refugees, or cargoes. At anchor the boat was under the supervision of a sentry, who had orders to shoot should she get under weigh. Mr. Webb was asked why he left the boat without permission; why he carried two rifles without a permit from the Japanese authorities; why they were spying.

According to Mr. Webb when he told the Japanese official to register any complaints with the British Consul-General, he received the reply, "What has the British Consul general to do with me?"

Mr. Webb continued, however, to instruct Japanese engineers in the running of the boat at the instigation of the Japanese. When they had become fairly proficient the boat was suddenly taken over entirely by them without a cent of remuneration, the reason given being that she had previously flown the British flag. To add to the injury Mr. Webb received a letter from the owners of the boat from whom he and his friends had leased her, to the effect that the ship had been declared confiscated by the Japanese for trading on the Sungari river under the British flag, and that a further punishment was in order by law to the captain of the boat (Mr. Doran Webb) in the form of a fine not exceeding $1,000. They reluctantly, however, to a certain extent, reduced the fine to one of $300.

After several other indignities suffered at the hands of officials, Mr. Webb decided to change his sphere of activities.

Romance Of Royalty Thrills Sweden

Prince George And Princess Ingrid

NATIONS ARE WATCHING

When the Prince of Wales and Princess George arrived at Stockholm all the city went to the station to meet them.

All Stockholm watched with deepest interest the meeting between Prince George and Princess Ingrid. The rumour had spread through the country that Prince George and the beautiful young princess may soon become engaged.

Rumour has spread the story that at a royal family gathering the King of Sweden would announce to the family first, and to the world afterwards, the news of the betrothal of the princess to Prince George.

The report has spread so widely that Sweden had begun to accept the engagement as a fact. The rumour persists.

King Gustav and all the members of the Swedish royal family in the capital met the Princess as they stepped from the train from Malmo.

The King grasped the hand of the Prince of Wales as he jumped from his compartment, followed by Prince George, who, after greeting the King, strolled over to Princess Ingrid.

WATCHED BY CROWD.
For a few minutes the handsome young couple were together, and every eye in the vast throng watched the warm handshake and the happy exchange of smiles.

As they chatted, and while the Prince of Wales moved among the royal group, the young Princess was laughing at almost every remark Prince George was making.

Until the King led the Prince towards the station entrance the eyes of the crowd were trained on the obviously happy Prince and Princess.

As the King preceded the Prince of Wales towards the royal cars outside, the crowd still watched Prince George and Princess Ingrid, who followed.

All Stockholm would have dearly liked to know what they were saying to one another. Whatever it was both evidently enjoyed it.

The brilliant sun shone down on the group as they entered the cars, and cheers rolled out along the beautiful streets as the royal party drove slowly to the palace.

SETTING THE FASHION.

The Prince of Wales had not been in Stockholm ten minutes before his sturdy originality had set the city talking of new fashions. For he wore a silk hat, all that goes with it, and a blue striped shirt.

Union Jacks were hanging all over the town. Some of the newspapers have printed columns in English and the streets were crowded with people anxious to catch a glimpse of the visitors.

MANY ATHLETES WITH AMERICAN SQUADRON HERE.

were no last minute rush. It was in fact one of the quietest troop-departures Hong Kong has ever witnessed.

In addition to the Argyll battalion, there were 248 other details on board the vessel, en route from England to Shanghai. These included 173 officers and men of the Queen's Regiment, 56 of the R.A.S.C., 11 of the R.A.O.C., three R.A.M.C. men, one M.P.S.C. and three of the R.E.

Shortly after 9.30 this morning visitors were asked to leave the ship, and promptly at 9.55 the gangway was drawn in. The G.O.C.'s flag was hoisted and there was a stir on the deck as the ship moved off.

The band of the Lincolnshire Regiment which had been playing selections of the quays, struck up Auld Lang Syne, while the band of the Argylls on deck played the same strain. A wild air by the pipe band, from the bow of the vessel, was the signal for cheers, which lasted until the ship was turning her nose to the entrance of the harbour.

Officers Aboard.

The officers of the Argyll Regiment who left this morning were:—Lt. Col. N. C. Bennett, O.B.E., M.C., Officer Commanding, Major G. L. Campbell, M.C., Capt. R. G. Moir, D.S.O., M.C., Capt. Maclean, M.C., Capt. R. C. B. Anderson, M.C., Lieut. G. L. Neilson, E. A. F. MacPherson, D. R. Stevenson, R. M. Keith-Murray, S. C. McKay, M.C., J. H. G. Black, J. C. Church, F. C. C. Graham, J. A. Maitland and the Padre of the Battalion, the Rev. M. McCloud, M.A., C.F.

O.A.G. FLIES AT KAI TAK.

H.E. the Officer Administering the Government, Hon. Mr. Wilfrid T. Southern, C.M.G., accompanied by Mrs. Southern and Lt. Richardson, A.D.C., made an official inspection at the Civil Air Port, Kai Tak, Kowloon City, yesterday afternoon.

At the conclusion of the inspection, Mr. A. V. Harvey, Hong Kong Manager and Chief Demonstration Pilot, Far East Aviation Co., Ltd., took one of the planes, an AW19, aloft and stunted high overhead.

Later, H.E. the O.A.G. and Mrs. Southern were taken for a flight in the Cutty Sark amphibian over Kowloon and the surrounding districts.

It is understood that this is the first occasion that either His Excellency or his wife has flown.

CASEY'S BANKING ACCOUNT

by C. L.
Hales.

YOU have never heard tell, have you, of Jim Casey and his banking account?

"No," says you, being English.

"What was the to-do about it?"

Well, when Casey came into his fortune, and the same was a good fifty pounds, he put it in the Muldringh Bank. They gave him a cheque-book and made him write his name in a book, which was as much as he could do in the way of writing.

"Take care of it," he said to the man who took over his money.

"I'd be ruined entirely if you lost

it. Where will you put it?" and he gave a squint or two about the place.

"Oh, we'll look after it all right.

There's the safe. It goes in there for the night, and comes out here under the counter in the day-time,

just for an airing."

Which it all seemed reasonable to Casey. So he put the cheque-book in his pocket, and the same book he took to be a proof that he had the money in the bank, for he knew no more than you or me what the cheque-book was for.

"I know what's it for," says

you.

So do I now, but I didn't then,

till Casey afterwards told me.

"How could he tell you," says

you, "if he didn't know himself?"

Why, that was after what happened what I'm telling you about.

Casey was mighty anxious about his fortune. So was his wife, and said words to that effect. "You old gosssoon," she says, "how do you know they'll keep it safe?

You know what thieves Shaughnessy and his kin are. Ain't you going to look after it?" Shaughnessy was "the manager of the bank.

"Perhaps I'd better," said Casey,

a bit perplexed.

"You had better," says his wife.

"Else I see my new gown still in the shop, and the money gone."

For he had promised her a new gown against the time he should start in and spend his fortune.

"If you take my advice you'll keep a good eye on that money," went on Mrs. Casey.

"So I will," says Casey, and he started right away.

He went down to the bank and hung around for the rest of the day.

And the day after, and the day after that, he stayed outside the bank, keeping his weather-eye open. And the same eye he kept more fixed on the inside than the outside of the bank, for it was there he expected him to appear. He'd go there first thing in the morning and lean on the window-sill by the door and take a look in at the door to see what they were up to. And he left the pig and the garden for the time to look after themselves, which the same they were well able to do, considering he never gave them much of his attention.

And he left the bit of a job he had his Father Murphy's. "For," says he,

"I make more money by looking after what I've got."

"And a mighty sensible thing, too," you'll say.

"No, I don't," says you, being

English and contrary.

Anyhow, Casey hung around where

I said he did, most of every day.

Sometimes he went to the bank, for things might happen there that shouldn't. But that was mainly at night-time, for he'd go there on the night when so minded. He kept a good watch on that bank, did Casey, with a big shillelagh under his arm.

A WHOLE WEEK'S NEWSPAPERS IN ONE.

The thrilling tale of the rescue of 31 Japanese seamen from the battered wreck of the fishing trawler Shea Shan Maru 150 miles from Hainan Island, was related by officers of the British steamship Glenfield, Capt. R. L. Sanders commanding, which arrived in Hong Kong at 9 p.m. on October 31, more than 24 hours overdue.

The Japanese craft, sighted in a sinking condition, had lost her mast and rudder, was out of fuel and stores, and her crew were almost exhausted by their ceaseless battle with the sea, which had lasted for three days.

A full report is given in the OVERLAND CHINA MAIL.

Before the Hong Kong Divorce Bill was given second reading at the session of the Legislative Council on October 27, Hon. Mr. J. P. Braga, declaring that he represented a large proportion of the residents of the Colony, launched an attack upon the measure from moral and practical angles. Hon. Mr. J. J. Patterson, replying to Mr. Braga's criticism, said that so far as he could understand, the Divorce Bill did no more than transplant the English procedure to Hong Kong.

The Attorney-General, briefly explained the Bill. The Government, he said, was not concerned with the religious aspects of the case. The Hong Kong Bill followed the procedure adopted in the Federal Malay States, but did not go so far.

The Bill, he added, would not come into force until His Majesty's pleasure is known.

The meeting is reported in the OVERLAND CHINA MAIL.

A wedding of great social interest to the Colony, was solemnised in St. John's Cathedral on October 31, when Miss Enid Ida Elliot-Heywood, only daughter of Captain C. E. Elliot-Heywood, R.A.P.C., and Mrs. Elliot-Heywood, of Kowloon, became the bride of Captain Francis William Webb, Royal Artillery, only son of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. A. H. Webb, of Sevenoaks, Kent, and A.D.C. to His Excellency the Officer Administering the Government (the Hon. Mr. W. T. Southern, C.M.G.). The ceremony was performed by the Very Rev. A. Swann, M.A., D.S.C., Dean of Hong Kong, assisted by the Rev. Walton Rogers, M.A., Vicar of St. Andrew's Church, Kowloon.

CURRENT SPORTING GOSSIP

HINTS ON FOURSOME PLAY

By
JOYCE WETHERED.

FOR many years past October has been a month reserved chiefly for foursome competitions, and the season has wound up with the "Eye" foursomes at Ranelagh, followed a week later by the Worplesdon mixed foursomes, a slight diversion from the usual entirely feminine efforts.

This leads me to make a few comments on foursome play in general, the more so as they have a particular interest for me. What, to begin with, is it that makes a good foursome partnership? That may be a point not very easy to agree on.

But whatever else may be said on the matter, I think it will be agreed that the ideal partnership must at any rate be composed of two essential qualities. It must in the first place combine sympathy and understanding so as to form a suitable mental alliance; in the second place, there must be the usual qualities of good play required from both parties concerned.

A popular idea prevails that in foursome play the principle must necessarily apply that practice makes perfect. In other words, a foursome couple cannot do themselves full justice without a number of preliminary games together.

Whether this will always necessarily bring about a successful partnership I am more than a little doubtful. Theoretically, I agree, it ought to; on the other hand it can very well do no good at all.

I entertain these doubts because my experience has shown that in the days when I played in a great many of these tournaments new and unproved partnerships were often successful, while on their repetition, more than once, the same partners never played half as well together.

That seems to require some explanation, or, at any rate, suggests a certain misgiving.

A PART from my own experience, I remember that in the days when my brother and Cyril Tolley played almost invariably together in Walker Cup and International matches, they held an unbeaten record. Yet to my certain knowledge they never played a foursome together on any other occasions.

Their success was obviously due to the fact that they played well at the same time (which, after all, is all that is necessary), and that they were able to maintain the right mental harmony without worrying either themselves or each other in the process.

One very definitely wrong mental outlook, which we have all suffered from in our day, is the fear of letting our partners down. I should without hesitation put this idea well in front of a whole row of others, as being the most injurious of all to both parties concerned. Neither do I believe it is sufficiently realised how much power exists in thought or to what extent the subject of thought will affect the chances of winning.

To play with unnecessary or even justifiable qualms is going to make the game twice as difficult, and lay a severe handicap both on oneself and one's partner.

SOME other very curious ideas are prevalent about foursome play. A fairly common one is that a player can be a selfish partner and not think sufficiently of the alliance. I admit that this may happen in some ball games; but not in a case where every stroke is made individually and is unaffected by another player in the field.

In a golf foursome actually the last thing to be desired is that either of the players should have to think of anything or anybody except in connection with playing each shot as it comes along. If two people are concentrating solely on producing their best form and succeed in doing so, the result is bound to be a fine partnership.

The right mental harmony is not there at all if such fears or ideas as I have suggested are present. I should put down the reason of my brother's and Cyril's successes to the fact that they were quite unconscious of the fear of letting each other down or of the necessity of considering or humouring each other in any way.

As partners their only object was to produce the best golf of which they were capable and to prevent any nervous feeling or weakening thoughts from occupying their minds.

OF all the foursome competitions I know, that at Worplesdon is surely one of the pleasantest of the year. That, I think, is the general impression of all who take part in it. The women in this tournament show themselves to be decidedly better partners than opponents of the stronger sex.

This may be due to the gratifying feeling of playing a second from a more advanced position than they usually get, and knowing that they will be helped along and not left to struggle alone against superior strength.

This gives the lady the encouragement she needs when playing in the company of mightier golfers than herself.

THE success of this tournament also owes much to the good-natured attitude of the men to the event. They are invariably lenient and sympathetic with the limitations of their trailer partners; and it is equally to be expected—by way of return—that when occasionally we are left deep in the dykes and heather and woodlands of Worplesdon we are not destitute of the same kindly consideration for the greater power of arm displayed by the men.

A continual subject of interest that crops up every year is how the Worplesdon collaborations are made up. They often run in families, brothers and sisters, husbands and wives being allied, or the wider differences of "parents, uncles, or aunts in partnership with their junior associates.

Usually, and unfortunately, these combinations do not often win, although I should be sorry to assign the reason to any lack of mental harmony due to the near and intimate relationship.

THERE does exist, however, I feel sure, some subtle distinction. Perhaps it is that confidence between the partners can be all the more easily shaken. I am inclined reluctantly to believe, that the more that is known of the player's game the more apparent become the imperfections in it, which may have escaped notice under a more general impression. An admiration which is not too critical is generally worth a great deal.

In the early years of the foursomes I played more than once with both my brother and Cyril. Comparisons are notoriously odious, but I must admit that equally good partners as they actually were, Cyril seemed especially to be a veritable tower of strength capable of any deeds necessary to win the game.

I am afraid this confession which is made in order to support my argument about possible weaknesses in family partnerships, may possibly provoke my "brother to murmur" "Ungrateful!" because, in spite of any destructive theories I may have put forward on the difficulties of these alliances, we did succeed in winning.

Still, I am prepared, after launching this dangerous generalisation, to see a family collaboration victorious again, just to show what victims of imagination we are.

My only wish is that the Worplesdon foursomes may never lose their present happy mixture of seriousness and sociability which is hard to find equalled in any other event of the year.

Germans Concede 5 Goals

C.B.A. WIN FRIENDLY ENCOUNTER.

Y.M.C.A. Take Things Easily.

BORDERERS GO DOWN BEFORE H.K.S.R.A.

[By Centre Half.]

On the home ground at King's Park yesterday afternoon, the C.B.A. defeated the German Club by 5 goals to nil in an interesting game.

Both teams fielded only ten men and were not at full strength, the C.B.A. being without the services of S. MacNider, N. Whitley, and J. J. King, while the Germans lacked Sommers, Dobernecker, and Heitmeier. They fielded three reserves in Seidler, Luchring and Grotenhuis.

A feature of the game, which was played over one half only, was the brilliance of M. Weill, in the C.B.A. defence. Seidler shaped well for the Germans, while Reek and May worked hard in defence. Johnson (3) and T. Whitley (2) netted for the winners.

The Germans had had luck on one occasion when a shot from Mueller struck the post, rebounded into play and was cleared.

Result:—

C.B.A. 5

German Club 0

C.B.A.: J. Sharpam; R. Phillips; L. W. Tippet; E. MacNider; M. Weill; L. Phillips; T. S. D. Whitley; W. G. Johnson; C. C. Francis; and R. Blyth.

German Club: Ammann; Reek; May; Seidler; Hanke; Luchring; Grotenhuis; Gerloff; Mueller; and Schmidt.

Borderers Beaten.

In a fast match on the U.S.R.C. ground yesterday afternoon, the H.K.S.R.A. defeated the South Wales Borderers by the odd goal in three. Johnson netted for the losers.

Lincolns Lose 4-0.

On the U.S.R.C. ground on Wednesday afternoon the S.W.B. defeated the Lincolns by 4 goals to nil. Hopkins (2) and Lt. Tyler (2) netted for the Borderers.

POLICE DRAW WITH STRONG Y.M.C.A. SECOND.

In a scrappy friendly encounter, played at King's Park yesterday (Continued at foot of next Column.)

BORDERERS' TEAM TRIUMPH.

To-day's Rugby.

At Sookunpoo yesterday, the D.M.C. of the South Wales Borderers defeated the Tamar rugby team by 16 pts. to 5. Sgt. Ford scored three tries for the Army team, Sgt. Deane converting two, and also a penalty goal.

There will be two games at Sookunpoo to-day. At 3 p.m. "A" Company of the S.W.B. will meet the Medway and at 4.30 p.m. the S.W.B. regimental team will play a strong navy team.

afternoon, the Y.M.C.A. second eleven draw with the Police, each side scoring one goal. The "Y" fielded several of their first team players, and took matters too easily, but it was refreshing to see that their forwards attempted a better combination. G. Perkins scored for the Police and G. C. Burnett equalised for the "Y".

The experiment of playing J. M. Wilson at half-back proved a success. In the "Y" defence, E. F. Seik and E. Owen played a hard game, while D. Blackmore and J. Perkins were outstanding for the Police.

BRENTFORD SHOULD RETAIN UNBEATEN RECORD TO-MORROW

VITAL TO VILLA.

Early Scores Lay Foundation Of Victory.

CHELSEA FALL.

By Neptune.

Aston Villa 3, Chelsea 1.

The game at Villa Park was rather remarkable for the fact that both Aston Villa and Chelsea had two goals disallowed.

Play was definitely divided, from the point of view of each side's supremacy, by the interval. Villa were brilliant in squares during the first half.

They obtained two goals within six minutes of the kick-off. Bishop presented the ball to Gibson, who juggled with it in such a way that he appeared to have mesmerised the Chelsea defence and with a left-foot shot the Scottish international sent the ball into the net. Woodley was deceived four minutes later, (odd) deflecting an innocuous-looking shot by Astley.

BRAINY BISHOP.

Bishop was the brains behind all these movements, and Chelsea continually reached the Villa's goal area. The home defence was generally running the wrong way.

Mills, deputising for Gallacher at centre forward, was persistent in these raids, and had he received better support from his inside men, Rankin and Miller, Chelsea might have equalised. Miller, however, reduced the deficit early in the second half.

Astley, who obtained Villa's third goal, was a good deputy for Brown.

MADE TO FIGHT TO THE END.

By Old Sport.

Blackpool 1, Arsenal 2.

If Phil Watson, Blackpool's centre half, deputising for Longden, injured, and captain for the day, had not kicked through his own goal in the match with the Arsenal, at Bloomfield-road, 20,000 people, including 1,000 from London, would have seen the Seasiders take their point in the First Division out of the Highbury side. The "Guns" only won by the odd goal of three, and had to fight all the way to do it.

Blackpool, with their four changes, were a surprisingly adaptable and forceful eleven, but their finishing fell just short of that required for success. Jack engineered the opening goal after thirteen minutes, but Coleman scored it. The inside right pushed the ball through to the centre, who was waiting for the sort of pass he enjoys. McDonough had no chance. The Arsenal had a gift goal five minutes from the interval, when Watson, trying to kick out a ground shot from Bastin, turned the ball out of the "keeper's" reach, but in three minutes the lead was reduced by McClelland, who converted a penalty kick for a foul on Butterworth.

SPACE IN THE CENTRE.

Blackpool were more dominant in the second half, but Preedy's fine goalkeeping foiled their attacks. There was so much space left in the centre of the field by the Seasiders that the Arsenal were able to develop raids of an intensity which probably no defence in the country could have countered better.

The policy of the Arsenal was a strong and well sustained backing of the forwards by the half-backs.

The long, oblique ground drives of Albert Watson were full of surprises, and in this respect no man on the field equalled him.

Watson was swifter than Everest in the rearguard, and both tackled strongly. McDonough was again very reliable in goal, and had by no means so much to do as Preedy on the other side.

It could not, of course, be expected that the standard of play so long associated with the visitors could be so affected as to lead to a fall, but the visitors came perilously near sacrificing a point. They had not the punch of the men they defeated.

Casey's Banking Account

so when he judged that the bank had taken enough to pay him what they owed him, he broke in by the back entrance.

He tried to open the safe but wasted his labour. Devil a bit would it open.

"Begorra," he thought, "if they've got my money in there it's there for good."

Upstairs the manager's wife heard Casey and woke her husband.

"There's thieves at the safe," she whispered.

"There's no harm in that," said her husband. "They can't open it or take it away," and he drowsed off again.

Down below Casey started trying the drawers under the counter, but found at first only the cheques with no money in them and other useless papers.

At last, tucked away in a corner, he came across a packet of notes which had been brought in at the last moment and put away hastily by the manager, not troubling to open the safe again.

"It's my own money or it's mine," muttered Casey. "I shan't count it now, for maybe I'll get more than my own by accident. And perhaps I'll get less," and thinking that way made him start counting the notes by the light of the bit of a candle he had brought.

Upstairs Mrs. Shaughnessy again shook her husband out of his drowse.

"Tisn't the safe they're at. They're getting the money, and you'll lose it and your job."

This roused Shaughnessy, and he got up, but being a cautious man he went first in search of a constable, going out by the private entrance and having a bit of a draw at his pipe the while. It wasn't long before he came across Constable Leary.

"A fine night, constable."

"A fine night it is, indeed, sir."

"I quite envy you being able to enjoy yourself of a night like this."

"What about yourself, sir? You're having a bit of a smoke and all."

"How do you know they said this?" says you.

Why, they told me afterwards.

"That reminds me, constable," went on Shaughnessy, looking at the stars, "there's a burglar in our bank. Won't you come and have a look at him?"

"That I will," said Leary, stiffening up. "Perhaps it's Casey again." They caught Jim as he was leaving by the front entrance.

"At it again, Casey," said Leary, the interfering blackguard. "It's conviction this time."

They marched him to the station and took the money from him, and then put him in the cell against the morning.

Jim said little, but laughed to himself most of the night, thinking how foolish they'd look when it was his own money he had taken. Sure enough, the notes came to fifty pounds.

In the morning Mr. Connell again saw Casey facing him from the dock.

"What's the charge this time?"

"Same as before," said the sergeant. "The proceeds were found on him."

"Which proceeds are mine," said Casey. "It's my fifty pounds or its twins."

After he had made Mr. Connell understand what he meant, the magistrate said to Shaughnessy, "Do you mean to charge Casey with taking his own money?"

Shaughnessy was taken aback.

"Has he got fifty pounds in the bank or has he not?" asked Mr. Connell.

"He has, your worship."

"Then I discharge him."

Casey was mightily puzzled about his money. "Give me my money back," he said to Shaughnessy, "or I'll hit you over the head with my shillelagh."

"You must draw a cheque or draft for it."

"Faith, I've had nothing but cheques and drafts," said Casey.

But the manager managed to give the procedure into Jim's mind, and he went home and took up his cheque-book. He told Mrs. Casey what he had to do.

"I could have told you that, you gossamer," she said.

Whether she could or whether she could not, and I have my doubts about it, Jim was able to sign a cheque to himself, writing it: "Pay Jim Casey himself and no other."

They had an idea, and a good one, too, as you'll admit.

"Not till I hear it," says you, being cautious.

Who's asking you?

Anyway, it seemed to Casey dead easy to write cheques. Why not write another? "You haven't got another fifty pounds there," said Mrs. Casey.

"No, but other people have, I dare say," says Jim. "Now there's Pat Connolly, the blackguard. I'll write one for him and pretend it is his. And once I get his money, faith, I won't give it him."

So he writes one: "Pay my friend, Mr. Jim Casey," and makes it out for another fifty, and signs it "Pat Connolly." Casey laughs a good bit at the "friend," for he and Pat were anything but friends.

That same day at noon he goes to the bank and hands over the counter his own cheque.

"How will you have it?" asks the cashier.

"In a bag," says Jim.

"I mean in what form, coin or notes?"

"Coin, of course, the notes may be no good."

"What coin—silver or copper?"

Jim thought coppers would be mighty handy, and said so.

"You'll be a great parcel," says the cashier. "Why not mix it, silver and copper?"

Casey said that would do, so after a deal of weighing of half-crowns, shillings, and pence, the paper bags of it were put in one cloth bag, and Jim grabs it. Then he hands over the other cheque and says, "Mr. Connolly wants it at once. I'll take it to him," and he grins to himself, for he knows he won't take the coin to Pat. The cashier looks at the cheque somewhat doubtfully, and turns it over and over. He looks at Casey, and Casey looks at him without turning an eyelid. The cashier goes and whispers to the manager, and after a word or two the cashier goes out. Casey leans over the counter.

"I'll take this lot home first," says he, "and come back for the other presently."

"Wait a bit," says Mr. Shaughnessy, "someone wants to see you most particular."

"See me," and Jim felt flattered. He always liked to be social and to see those that wanted to see him, what-ever happened afterwards.

"What do you mean?" says you.

In the way of rows and shillelagh work, I mean.

"Wait a bit," goes on Mr. Shaughnessy. "A great friend of yours will be along soon."

Jim puts his bag of coin back on the counter, but keeping a firm grip of it the while, and waits a bit. Soon in came the cashier—and who do you think?

"Constable Leary," says you, smartly for you.

Right for once. It was that interfering fellow again.

Mr. Shaughnessy whispers to him. Leary grins.

"At it again, Casey. You must come along with me. Forgery and attempted embezzlement this time."

"The money's my own," says Jim.

"I gave my cheque for it."

"Not for Connolly's lot, though," says Leary.

"I ain't got it yet," says Jim.

"And you won't get it," says Mr. Shaughnessy.

"Well, no harm's done. I was going to take it to Connolly," and Casey laughs, because they can't prove otherwise.

"Won't do," says Leary. "You must come along."

So they went to the court-house, and as they let him keep his bag of money, Jim was not so angry as he might have been. They ran him straight into court this time, where Mr. Connell was thinking of knocking off work for the day.

"Is he you, attorney," he asks, and as Casey looks at though it were himself, he goes on: "What's the charge?"

"Forgery and attempted embezzlement."

Mr. Shaughnessy goes into the box and tells what Casey had done, and hands up Connolly's cheque.

"Now, Mr. Connell was wanting his dinner, and, moreover, was now mighty doubtful about Muldrinch Bank charges."

"What's this?"

"The cheque Casey has forged."

"Isn't this Connolly's handwriting?"

"Don't know," answers Mr. Shaughnessy, looking mighty perplexed. "I've never seen it. You must have done so if he has any money in your bank."

"He hasn't any money with us."

"Drawn it all?"

"No. He never had an account with us."

Mr. Connell glowered like an angry man at the bank manager, and seemed at a loss, which gave Casey a chance.

"As they can't prove that I wasn't going to take the money to Connolly, although there was none of the same to take."

Mr. Connell spluttered.

"I discharge the prisoner, and if he comes here again on bank business, I'll put Mr. Shaughnessy in the dock instead."

So Casey, mighty pleased, swinging his bag of coin, the which he rattled against the court door as he left, to let them know he had his own back, went home to tell Mrs. Casey how he closed his account at the bank.

Shortage Of Water In Colony

Restrictions In Force To Save Trouble.

CONSUMPTION GAINS.

A possible repetition of the serious water shortage of recent months is being checked, as the Government has early taken steps to impose restrictions in order to avoid public inconvenience.

From Monday, November 7, water will be available only ten hours per day, from 6 a.m. to 11 a.m. and from 4 p.m. to 9 p.m.

In an official statement last night on the water position the Government said:

The total water storage of the Colony amounts to 2,703.51 million gallons as against 2,780 million gallons at this time last year. The explanation of the reduced figure this year is to be found in the largely increased consumption, which has risen from a weekly total of 118 m.g. to one of 127.34 m.g. It is not possible to draw increased supplies from Shing Mun before next wet season, and it is not probable that there will be any effective rainfall during the coming dry season. It is obvious therefore that restriction of some kind must be enforced if the supplies are to be depended upon to hold out against a possible failure of the earlier Spring rains.

It is considered that a comparatively slight restriction enforced from the early stages will bear less hardly on the community than a full supply for the time being with severe restrictions to follow.

Hoarding Unnecessary.

It is proposed therefore to make restrictions from Monday, November 7, in a manner which should interfere as little as possible with the daily life of any section of the community and which will make hoarding of any kind unnecessary. But the co-operation of every individual is called for to prevent waste in the smallest degree, and to make it possible to carry through to next wet season with no increase in the restriction.

The restriction now imposed applies to the whole Colony, and a special word of caution is called for. The condition of this year, with the complete abolition of the rider main system and the consequent restriction of the whole Colony in the early stages, are new, and the result of the experiment has yet to be awaited. The possibility of further restrictions must always be kept in mind, and it will depend on the efforts of individual consumers whether or not they will be called for.

EMBEZZLING CHARGE ADJOURNED.

Restitution Sought For Employers.

Appearing on a remanded charge of embezzling $13,253.97 from Messrs. Thomas, Cook & Son, to which he pleaded guilty on Wednesday, Lo Kau, a former clerk, was remanded a further week by Mr. Kennedy-Skipiton in the Central Police Court this morning. Mr. F. H. Loseby held a watching brief on behalf of the complainant firm, and Mr. H. C. Lee appeared for the accused.

Detective-Sergeant Byron remarked that none of the money had been recovered.

Mr. Lee.—My object of asking for a remand is to get his relatives from the country to make restitution to the firm. I understand that the accused has made admission of his guilt.

Accused was remanded for a week.

There is only one floating school in the Colony though there are sampan children in some of the schools in the Shaukiwan district. Their attendance is intermittent and according to the 1931 census, the standard of literacy is lower among the boat people than among other sections of the community.
